Restless legs syndrome (RLS) is a disabling disorder characterized by a pattern of paresthesia and motor restlessness that is worse at night. Recent studies have suggested that genetic factors are involved in the development of RLS. In order to assess the importance of genetic factors in RLS, we examined two twins, one with, and one without RLS, and analyzed the 24 studied microsatellites. Our results showed that allelic combinations of the 24 microsatellites are different for the two individuals. Moreover, the father of the RLS patient and the twin brother of the RLS-free twin are monozygotic, suggesting an autosomal dominant mode of transmission. These results strongly support the contention that genetic factors underlie the etiology of RLS.

Q: Using Grand Theft Auto to find all the combination of a vending machine? I'm trying to find a pattern in this vending machine with the numbers 0-9 on it. After finding the pattern for a subset of the numbers, I'm trying to combine all of these possible combinations to make the pattern larger. I'm not sure what search algorithm to use. I used the program called raku to generate all possible combinations, but that takes too long. I use Python to loop through all the combinations. It takes ages to loop through all the combinations of the first number. I tried to use the recursion, but I don't know how to store a reference to the previous combination. My current code: `l1=[0]*9 648931e174`
